

Get Instructor Training Updates on Controlled F.O.R.C.E. Video Blog

Posted: 29 February 2012

Controlled F.O.R.C.E. announces the launch of its video blog: ControlledFORCEvblog.

The video blog (vBlog) will make it easier for law enforcement officers and instructors to get information and updates on Controlled F.O.R.C.E. Training. The vBlog will feature posts from Controlled F.O.R.C.E. Instructors Tony Grano and Toby Flaget, both on the road during training and in the office. Expect posts from guest instructors and staff as well.

In the first ControlledFORCEvblog post, National Instructor Toby Flaget reaches out to Controlled F.O.R.C.E. Master Instructors to start preparations for the 2012 U.S.N.S.T.A. Tactical Training Seminar. A variety of law enforcement training topics are being scheduled. Tentative topics include: instructor development, high-risk traffic stops, fitness training, M.A.C.H. training, OC training, small team tactics, room extractions, weapon retention, baton training, handling juveniles, active shooter training, Controlled F.O.R.C.E. re-certification, and practical application scenario training.

Be sure to check out ControlledFORCEvblog and Subscribe to our channel.

The official announcement of the 13th Annual U.S.N.S.T.A. Tactical Training Seminar will be made soon, so stay tuned...

<http://www.youtube.com/user/ControlledFORCEvblog>